

The $20 Billion Distraction: How They Tried to Outrun the Truth

What would you do if you were one of the biggest pharmaceutical companies in the world — and suddenly found yourself staring down the barrel of a $15 billion legal firestorm?

If you're them, you don't speak.

You don't defend.

You don't deny.

Instead, you announce a $20 billion investment in the United States — and hope the media eats it up.

But here's the truth: I filed a $15 billion arbitration against them and related shell entities. And that filing is backed by over 100 exhibits, whistleblower claims with federal agencies, and undeniable proof of fraud, concealment, and labor exploitation running through healthcare, retail, and legal networks.

Their announcement wasn't growth.

It was a $20 billion deflection.

---

I Didn't Start This Fight. But I'm Going to Finish It.

I'm a whistleblower.

I worked inside the wellness industry.

I watched how billion-dollar companies used dissolved shell entities to hire, fire, manipulate, and cover up.

My story touches them, yes, It involves doctors. Law firms. Executives. Foundations. Arbitration firms.

It's a spiderweb that nobody thought would ever be unwound — until I started pulling.

What I Filed:

- A $15 billion arbitration demand, now growing due to concealment and discovery obstruction
- A whistleblower claim officially acknowledged by the IRS, with an assigned claim number
- Submissions to the Department of Labor, NLRB, and other agencies
- Motions prepared demanding full discovery from non-appearing upstream parties, including them
- A case so strategically tight that — their original law firm — withdrew
- A follow-up silence so suspicious that their new firm, won't even say who they represent and hide behind a dissolved shell.

And the pharmaceutical company?

Not a word.

Not a denial.

Not a motion.

Not a single defense.

Then, Out of Nowhere — They Announce $20 Billion for America.

That announcement hit May 14, 2025.

Just weeks after I publicly exposed their role.

Just weeks after their legal shield collapsed.

Just as the arbitration docket began stacking against them.

Just as the IRS, DOL, and NLRB began to receive my filings.

So ask yourself:

- Why would a global pharmaceutical company suddenly decide to invest $20B into the exact country where they're being accused of defrauding workers and manipulating payroll through shell entities?
  - Why now?
  - Why not France, where they're headquartered?
  - Why not earlier?

Because This Isn't About Growth. It's About Survival.

This is the corporate playbook at its most transparent:

When you're under investigation, flood the narrative with patriotism and capital.

Make the public believe you're helping the country.

Make regulators hesitate.

Make journalists second-guess the angle.

And most of all—create confusion before discovery starts.

It's not an investment. It's a PR firewall.

But here's the problem with playing defense against someone who doesn't back down:

I already filed.

I already exposed the network.

I already put the truth on record.

And I'm just getting started.

They Think This $20B Buys Silence. But It Only Buys Time.

The world deserves to know:

- Who really issued the paychecks behind shell vendors
- How dissolved companies were used to terminate workers with no liability
- What their internal executives knew about labor concealment
- Why law firms would rather withdraw than go on record defending it

This isn't just a fraud case. It's a healthcare betrayal.

It's a corporate con at the highest level.

It's the kind of systemic rot that infects every corner of society—from the medicine you buy to the legal structure built to silence you when you speak up.

And now they want to pretend it never happened?

Not on my watch.

Final Word: If They're Innocent, Why the Silence?

They have teams of lawyers.

Billions in liquidity.

PR agencies. Political connections.

They could have denied everything the moment I filed.

But they didn't.

They withdrew. They dodged. They ducked.

And now, they throw $20 billion on the table like it's going to make the allegations disappear.

But justice isn't for sale. And neither is truth.

This story is about to be global.

Not because of what they built—but because of what they tried to hide.

And when the world asks who brought it to light, they'll find my name first.

Sincerely,

Jorden Hollingsworth
